COUNTY FRUIT CROP SHOWS GOOD PROSPECT

Heavy Frosts During May Did No Damage, According To Reports

HAY SHORT THIS YEAR

DOYLESTOWN, June 28.—In spite of the fact that the general outlook for the fruit crop, according to a survey made by the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Association is not very promising, County Agent William P. Greenawalt stated today that unless something unusual happens later in the season, Bucks county will have a bumper crop of apples and peaches.

The report of the state association says in part: "Condition of fruits which are already low declined still further during May. May frosts were damaging and all fruits will be a failure in some localities.

"In the commercial area apple prospects are only slightly in excess of one-half a full crop, peaches not more than one-quarter of a crop and pears just one-half a crop."

Mr. Greenawalt stated that Bucks county was fortunate in that it did not suffer during the heavy frost in May. He added that at least six Bucks county orchardists have an unusual set of apples and peaches and heavy crops of both are anticipated. The cherry crop, according to Mr. Greenawalt, was very good this year.

Speaking of the potatoes, Mr. Greenawalt said about the same acreage was planted this year as in previous years. As yet it is too early to know what damage will be done by the blight.

Warm weather the past few days has been hurrying the wheat and many of the fields which the latter part of last week were a dark green color, have turned to a golden yellow. The winter wheat was damaged by the winter kill and consequently in some places the crop will not be so heavy. The length of the straw will be rather short because of the drought the early part of May. As yet no traces have been seen of the Hessian fly.

The hay crop will not be as heavy as had been expected because of the drought in May. The clover is unusually short. Should there be some rain before the harvest of the timothy crop, there is a chance of having good returns from this crop.

Many of the farmers, who are now in the midst of the hay harvest, realized that the crop will be short and consequently more soy beans were sown in the county than ever before. This crop can be harvested in September.

Corn in the lower part of Bucks county is not developed as far as that in the upper section. This is because farmers in the lower end postponed planting later this season with the hope of avoiding the damage by the Japanese beetle. Farm clubs and granges in the lower end of the county, at their meetings this spring have been discussing ways and means of preventing the Japanese beetle from damaging the corn crop and one of the suggestions was that the farmers plant their corn later in the season.

While the weather has been quite warm, the cut worm and the common stock corn borer have been doing some damage in different parts of the county. Mr. Greenawalt stated that cold, wet weather is favorable to the cut worm, but this spring has been so warm and dry that this insect has not had an opportunity to develop to a great extent.

In reference to trucking Mr. Greenawalt stated yesterday that this year the Mexican bean beetle is particularly injurious to the green string beans. It usually attacks these first and often, when it is unable to prey on this variety of bean, attacks the leaves of the lima bean. It is not the insect itself which does the actual damage to the leaves of the beans, but the larva. The beetle can be distinguished by sixteen spots on its back.

As a means of exterminating this pest which has not been known in this section for more than two years, Mr. Greenawalt recommended spraying with calcium arsenate. He cautioned against the use of arsenate of lead because the spray will kill the leaves. He also cautioned against spraying the bean plants after the pods have developed because of the poisonous nature of the substance there is danger in getting some of the poison when the beans are served.

CUTTING AFFRAY SENDS TWO MEN TO HOSPITAL

Henry Jourdan, Colored, Is Terribly Slashed by Walter Keyes Early Today

POLICE HAVE A BATTLE

A terrific battle was staged early this morning between two colored men on Lafayette street, between Wood and Cedar streets.

According to accounts given to the police it was the ending of a perfect party staged on a house on Lafayette street.

Henry Jourdan, 27, 1119 Cherry street, was cut and sustained deep gashes on the face, arm, back and under arm. Fourteen stitches were taken at the Harriman Hospital.

Walter Keyes, Pine street, has lacerations of the fingers and ear.

Jourdan's story is to the effect that he was assisting a male friend into an automobile when Keyes approached him and started to fight. The two men went to blows and then Keyes, is alleged to have drawn a long knife and slashed at Jourdan.

Jourdan ran in and out of the crowd of his friends and up and down the street in an attempt to escape. But Keyes kept at him until police arrived. Officer Ryan just missed being stabbed by Keyes but acting in time drew his gun on the enraged man.

LAKES ALWAYS MECCA FOR MOTOR TOURISTS

Many Attractive Camping Spots Along Lakes George and Champlain

THE ROUTE IS OUTLINED

Lake George and Lake Champlain have ever been a mecca for motorists seeking attractive camping spots and to these two beautiful summer playgrounds the Keystone Automobile Club has mapped a tour that will prove a pleasant outing for vacationists seeking to combine a camping tour with an interesting automobile journey.

"More than 300 islands dot the surface of beautiful Lake George and many of them bearing signs 'state land,' may be used by campers, subject, of course, to certain restrictions in the matter of fires and cutting of timber," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the club.

Old forts, ruins of Indian villages and relics gathered here bear mute testimony of the historic association of this highly scenic region. At the head of Lake George stands historic old Fort Ticonderoga. In the hills at Hague are the old "Indian Kettles," where the redmen cooked their food in holes in the rocks, which they operated much in the same manner as are fireless cookers today. The military well and earthworks of old Fort William Henry and the ruins of ancient Fort George are also points of interest to thousands of visitors annually.

From Bristol follow route No. 113 to Buckingham, then No. 122 to Doylestown. From there the tour leads north in the Lackawanna Trail, marked as national route 611 to Easton. From here state route 12 is used through Wind Gap and Saylorburg to Stroudsburg.

From Stroudsburg national route 209 is followed to Dingmans Ferry where the Delaware River is crossed to Layton and a left turn carries the tourists to Fort Jervis. From here national route 6N is used thru Wurtsboro to Kingston on the banks of the Hudson. Northward the famous Storm King Highway marked as national route 9W is followed through the Catskill regions, Albany and Cohoes to Saratoga Springs. This attractive resort is a mecca for sportsmen especially during the horse racing season in August.

Northward the travelers drive over state route 10, passing through Greenfield Center and Corinth to the village of Lake George. Located on the most southern shore of the beautiful Lake, this quaint village is one of the most attractive resorts along the entire thirty-two miles of lakeside in this section. From here tourists can make numerous side trips into beautiful scenic regions. Northward along the west shore of the lake tourists pass over state route 19 through the fashionable cottage colony of Bolton to Bolton's Landing. From here state route 47 leads through Sabbath Day Point and Hague to Ticonderoga. Further north excellent highways carry the travelers along both sides of Lake Champlain.

Another attractive trip leads from Saratoga Springs over national route 9 to Schroon Lake and other attractive resort regions in Adirondack State Park. From quaint old Chestertown, state route 10 is followed to Indian Lake, Long Lake and Tupper Lake. Near this latter point are Saranac Lake and Lake Placid, both highly attractive resorts. The homeward journey can be started from Saratoga Springs over the same highways on which the tour started.

Mrs. Goheen Coar, of 704 Pine street, is in the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, where she is receiving treatment for illness.

Body of Croydon Recluse To Be Buried Today

The body of Robert T. Clark, Croydon recluse, who was killed when run over by a train at Lawndale, Whitaker avenue and the Boulevard, Philadelphia, on the night of June 19th, is to be buried in Philadelphia today.

The body of Clark, who for a number of years while he lived in a dilapidated shack in Croydon, claimed he was the long-lost Charlie Ross, who years ago was kidnapped, has been in charge of the Philadelphia coroner, Justice of the Peace James McLaughlin, of Croydon, signed for the release of the body.

It is believed by many that Clark's mind dwelt upon famous kidnapping cases, and that it was thus that he came to believe he was the missing Ross individual. In Clark's abode were found stories and books pertaining to the Ross case as well as that of John Libe, who was also kidnapped a number of years ago.

The body has been resting in a Philadelphia morgue since the tragedy occurred. When Clark was found his legs and an arm were severed. It is believed that he committed suicide.

A. O. H. NINE WINS IN A KEEN PITCHING DUEL

Whitewash First Half Champions, the Federals, by 1-0 Score

SULLIVAN VS. BROOKS

Schedule For Tomorrow
A. O. H. vs. CROYDON
(At Croydon)
Result of Last Night
A. O. H., 1; Federals, 0

By T. M. Juno

One of the keenest pitching duels of the season was exhibited on St. Ann's field last night as the A. O. H. team white-washed the first-half champions, the Federals, 1-0.

The two participants in the hurling contest were Sullivan, for the "Hibees" and Brooks, for the Federals. Sullivan allowed but four meek hits and although he was in danger several times, he tightened up at the opportune moments and kept his opponents away from the home platter. He was accorded very good support. The only error in the A. O. H. column was after the hurler's name, himself.

Brooks, likewise pitched excellent ball and if his team had done a little better hitting, he would have walked off with a triumph.

The only run of the game was scored in the fifth inning. McCafferty, the first batter had rolled out to Dugan; Sullivan fanned; J. Brady won a walk and immediately stole second; Thompson worked Brooks into the ticklish position of 3 and 2 and then whaled a double to left field, counting Brady; Connors kept up the hitting with another hit in front of the plate, but Thompson tried to score and was nipped on DeRisi's throw to the plate.

Connors led the hitters of the evening, gathering two singles for his share of the six Hibernians' hits. The hitter also did some fancy catching in centerfield, pulling down five hard hit flies to his position.

McDevitt had one out of two for a .500 average to lead the losers.

The Federals gave up chances to score in the first and second innings. In the first with one out, McDevitt walked and stole second, but neither Barrett nor Dietrich could drive him across. In the second, with two out, Cochran doubled to left and stole third but Wilkinson could do nothing to drive him over.

The Hibernians' opportunity first showed up in the third when Sullivan led off with a single; J. Brady tried to sacrifice but bunted a fly to the pitcher, Sullivan made first by a hair-line after the catch; Thompson forced Sullivan, Brooks to Dietrich; Connors slammed a single to right; Coyle struck out.

G. Dougherty led one Hibernians with a single in the fourth but was nabbed trying to steal.

The Federals put runners on base in the fifth, sixth and seventh but could not drive the runners home.

The defeat was the first of the second half for the Federals who won the first half.

SON OF MURDERED MAN DROWNS IN SCHUYLKILL RIVER

Anthony Tilotta, 10, Former Bristol Lad, Had Been Fishing

MOTHER IS IN PRISON

Is Third Tragic Incident to Occur in Family of Late John Tilotta

The third tragic incident in the family of John Tilotta, deceased, a resident of Bristol, occurred yesterday when the son and only child, was drowned in the Schuylkill River at Philadelphia.

Anthony Tilotta, 10, who since his mother was sentenced to life imprisonment, has been an inmate of the Northern Home for Friendless Children, 5500 Ridge avenue, Philadelphia, was drowned at the mouth of the Wissahickon.

Anthony—or Tony, as his companions have known him—had refused earlier in the day to go with a group of about twenty-five boys to Gustine Lake in Fairmount Park for a swim. These boys were escorted by Charles Gape.

But after they had gone, Tony began to want some sort of diversion, so he and another boy, Adam Middleton, left the home and went off to the Schuylkill to fish. After fishing for a while, Tony decided to take a swim, and jumped into the river.

His body did not come back to the surface, and Adam, panic-stricken, called for help. Park Guard Lewis J. Kauffman heard his cries, and ran to the scene. But it was too late to save Tony's life.

After grappling for about an hour, Kauffman brought the body to the surface. It was taken to the morgue, where it was claimed by Diagio Tilotta, 1906 South Warnock street, an uncle of the boy.

R. C. Flanders, superintendent of the home where Tony has been since June 24th of last year, believed that when the boy jumped into the river he became entangled in some wire which prevented him from having the use of his arms and legs, as he was a good swimmer.

"Something like this must have occurred," he said, "else he would not have drowned."

Tony's mother, Mrs. Maria Tilotta, is serving a life sentence in the Eastern Penitentiary for having plotted to murder her husband

TALLEST

For 41 years the Eiffel Tower in Paris has been a fly in the ointment of those Americans who found pleasure in claiming for their country the biggest and best in everything. There was no structure in the United States to tower above or even to equal in height Paris' famous steel pile.

That annoying fly is removed by the completion of the Chrysler building in New York. It is of 78 stories and is 46 feet taller than the Eiffel Tower, which is short of 1,000 feet by 16 feet.

With this newest American achievement in architecture and construction the Old World has nothing to compare. The skyscrapers of American cities are to the European imagination but typical of the miraculous character with which nearly everything American is invested.

Influenced by structural methods in the United States, European cities have begun building tall buildings, but they are tall only by Old World standards where five stories is above the average. In this respect Europe is not gaining on us for every time she adds a story we add two.

Skyscrapers are a necessity in the American city, while in Europe they are merely whims of such megalomaniacs as Mussolini. Not until Europe carries on commerce on as a vast scale as it is done here will she need 1000-foot high buildings.

PAYING IN CASH

For the first time since our war debtors began making payments the payments for the first half of the current fiscal year were made entirely in cash, instead of in securities of the American government. This is explained by the present high prices of government securities, which make cash cheaper for the foreign debtors than government bonds.

It is not hard now to see the wisdom of the option given the debtors seven years ago to pay in American government securities. Like other then criticized features of the settlements, it has been vindicated by the results.

With foreign powers in the market for American securities they brought higher prices to the profit of the government and domestic owners of those bonds. Moreover, it effected by the simple transaction of payment by the foreign debtor an automatic retirement of the securities involved and consequent equivalent reduction of the national debt.

This method was found of great assistance by the treasury department in inaugurating and maintaining its policy of using all war debt payments to reduce the national debt.

One little thing that saves lots of money is the word no.

Chinese women are letting their feet grow naturally. Maybe they aren't going to dance with the men anymore.

Today's definition: A Scotchman is a fellow who waits for the smaller money to pay back that $5 so he won't have to give you so much paper.

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Courier:

Sir—In connection with the letter from "The Children of Formosa to the children of the World," sent to Dr. Fox by Mrs. Seth Hibino, a former Bristol girl, which was published in both the Bristol Courier and the Bucks County Independent, it is interesting to note that the Committee on World Friendship Among Children is now gathering in the final shipment of Treasure Chests for the Philippine children, hoping to send 1,500 from Eastern Pennsylvania and many thousands from all over the United States.

Miss Mary J. Haines, director of Peace Department in the local W. C. T. U., reported at a recent meeting that six of these chests are being sent from Bristol, having been purchased by the W. C. T. U. at $2 each and filled by children of the public schools under the direction of several teachers: Miss Heritage, Miss Ellis and Mrs. Monroe, of the Harriman schools; Miss Rogers, of Washington street school, and Miss Marie Watson, of the Laurel Bend school. The Girl Reserves of the high school also filled a chest.

The Treasure Chests are made of metal to resist the attacks of white ants, are 10-2x6-2x5 inches in size, with brass handles and lock and key, and are beautifully decorated in eleven colors with world maps, pictures of Washington and Rizal (the Filipino hero), Columbus and Magellan, sea serpent, whale, Old Boreas, and Neptune controlling the winds and waves. Each chest contains a book suggested by list from the committee, a printed form letter to the children, and many small articles purchased by the school children for their Filipino friends—pencils, pads, crayons, balls, jacks, marbles, whistles, beads, soap, washcloths, handkerchiefs, tooth brushes, paste, puzzles, games, or about 24 articles in each chest, all neatly wrapped in tissue paper and tied with bright ribbons. There is also in most cases a letter from the children and an addressed envelope for reply.

The "Treasure Chests" are the third "good-will gesture" sponsored by the Committee on World Friendship Among Children, the first in 1927 being 13,000 dolls sent to Japan by Dawn, mystery girl of the African tribe in the British East African Protectorate, is consecrated by decree to become the mystic bride of the native black god, much to her horror, and that of Tom Allen, in love with her. He has learned that she is white. Ranking from a terrific physical beating at his hands, she escapes, but, conceals herself in a cave, where she is discovered by the German commanding officer of the seized protectorate, of Dawn's flight being broken by Tom. Fearful of native uprising and white massacres, Eric decides to remove Tom, his friend, to England. The natives assemble for the ritual of Dawn's sacred marriage.

SYNOPSIS

INSTALLMENT EIGHTEEN

Tears mingled themselves with the black woman's impassioned appeal. "Oh, my precious one! There is no way out for you but through the door of death."

"I shall die if I am the bride of Malungbu. I shall live if I am bride to Tom. Never shall—"

She paused as Hasmall and the piper appeared in the doorway. Following the girl's eyes, Mooda also saw them. Had they overheard? She scrutinized Hasmall's face for some indication that he had listened to the girl's confession. But there was no hint in those features that he knew.

"The children of Malungbu are

waiting to follow you to the Tree of the Black God," he announced. Mooda, overcoming her alarm, threw a warning look at Dawn.

"We are ready," she said.

The piper placed his reed to his lips. Dawn, with a sigh, joined Mooda and awaited the pipe's signal to proceed.

Once beyond the surveillance of Captain Eric, Shep, rejoicing in his new sergeant stripes and a well-loaded army pistol, made it clear that he intended to exercise his authority to the utmost. Eric had given him a dozen heavily Askari guards, though the thought of escape was far beyond the minds of any of the prisoners but Tom.

"A snakey thing for Eric to do," sympathized Anzac, "putting that black devil in charge of us. Why couldn't he have been a kaiser man and let Blint' bring us here?"

"What does it matter?" returned Tom. "After all, Eric is technically an enemy of England. We can't look to our conqueror to accord us special favors, you know."

The Australian was amazed. "You still like him?" he demanded incredulously.

"Of course," said Tom. "Eric and I have long been friends. Perhaps I tried his patience. He has worries, naturally, being in command of a weakened garrison. All people lose their tempers and become unreasonable. Eric is simply human."

"Well, I wouldn't overlook what he did if I was in your place." "Let's forget it," suggested Tom. "After all, I should be glad for a chance to fight for England. I owe my country my services."

Anzac thought it discreet not to dispute that reasoning. He was aware, as were also the others, that Tom's eagerness to remain in Africa was to be near Dawn. Anzac didn't favor the liaison Tom had entered into with the native girl, but he had discovered in his journeying through the world that the affairs of another man are, however illicit, strictly his own.

It soon became apparent to the prisoners that they were enduring unnecessary hardships because of Shep's hatred of Tom. Though the trail was uphill, the black sergeant forced the men to march at a speed that quickly wearied them. As far as the men knew, there was no occasion for speed, yet Shep exhorted them with repeated cries of "time's short, keep movin'."

before, was punishing himself as well. Soon the march would be slower, its pace adjusted to Shep's own capabilities.

But as he secretly rejoiced in Shep's self-punishment, Tom was not aware of the true motive behind all that speed. He was presently to know, however. The trail led them into a clearing and there, a short distance away, stood the Temple of Malungbu. Shep had timed the march so that the prisoners could watch the wedding of Dawn to Malungbu.

"You can rest here a minute," said Shep craftily, with a meaning look at Tom.

Tom cursed him softly. He looked about but could find no sight of Dawn. He heartily hoped the ceremony had taken place, and the girl was secluded in the temple, but sight of the waiting natives assured him that his was a vain hope.

"The devil's only doing this to tempt you," Anzac advised him. "He's itching for a chance to kill you."

"I'd give him that chance if it weren't for Eric," commented Tom grimly.

"Sure, don't let him trick you." The prisoners dropped on the side of the trail and began lustily to sing "It's A Long Way to Tipperary." After several minutes of respite, the strains of the native pipe broke upon their own song. That was the signal Shep was waiting for. He ordered the men to cease their song.

"Time's got away," he added. "Dem niggers will be here soon and dere religious yowlin'. I've got to take you across dat bridge, five at a time. From dere I guess you'll find your way out o' me."

His cracked whip indicated the bridge, a wavering bamboo structure suspended over a deep declivity. The men, restoring their packs to their backs, made grim jests about the perils of crossing it.

"Dis squad first," Shep specified, singling out five men, not including Tom. As the members of the first unit stepped upon the trembling bridge, Tom beheld Dawn and Mooda emerge from the temple, and proceed toward the Tree of the Black God. Without hesitation he started toward them, only to be blocked by Shep.

"Captain Eric tell me to kill you if you do dat," muttered the black. Anzac also stepped forward to urge Tom not to be a fool. Reluctantly Tom joined his mates and started for the bridge. Before he could put foot upon it, he was called back by Shep. He paused, uncertain whether to obey or not. Finally he returned to face the black sergeant.

"Now dat you and me am never goin' to see each other, no more," began Shep, his hand on his whip stock. "I've got smethin' to tell you."

"Go ahead," suggested Tom indignantly. "There was a complacent gleam in Shep's eyes as he watched the Englishman. "What would you say if you found Dawn was white girl?" he asked.

With an effort Tom managed to suppress an exclamation of joy. Since the night he had overheard the conversation of Shep and Mooda, he had not doubted her Caucasian parentage. But here was Shep with the "power to prove it beyond dispute." But Shep must never know how great a power he held.

Tom shrugged. "Well suppose she is?" he said. "Nobody thinks she is. They think she's Mooda's daughter."

"I know different!" declared Shep sharply. "Dawn am white girl. No good for you to go to her now." He added quickly, fearful that Tom would attempt just that. He indicated his whip. "If dis don't stop you I got a gun dat will."

"Well," said Tom finally, "if Dawn is white, what do you intend to do about it?"

"Tomorrow," replied Shep with an evil smile, "she be goddess in de temple, where only black men can go."

Tom found it difficult to control himself. "Well?" he said. "I can go dere—alone!"

"You wouldn't dare harm her." There was alarm in Tom's voice. Shep retreated a few paces, his hand on his pistol. "No?" he said insolently. "You don't tell me!"

"What about Malungbu's waiting maid?" Tom reminded him. "She'd expose you to the tribe and they'd kill you."

Shep laughed easily. "Malungbu's waiting maid, yes. But how do you know dat she don't work for Shep, too?" He laughed again, enjoying Tom's helpless fury. "You know," he said, "Shep Keyes gets what he wants—always."

Anticipating Tom's rush, Shep drew his gun and thrust it into the Englishman's stomach. "Git!" he ordered through clenched teeth. "Cause my finger am fitchin' on this trigger. I see hopen' you makes a break for her, so's I can pump you full o' lead."

HOW IT WORKS IN CANADA

Prohibition in Canada was necessarily unsatisfactory because it did not prohibit the manufacture. Seizing on that the wets made and won a fight for "government sale." They promised that, if given government control they would reduce the amount squandered on drink to one-fifth of the amount then spent, or $5,000,000.

A bulletin has just been issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which shows that the $30,000,000 spent under Prohibition has in six years grown to $100,000,000. The sale of whisky which government sale was intended to curtail has increased over 60 per cent. Deaths from alcoholism have nearly doubled. Convictions for drunken driving have increased 1,300 per cent—that is, it is thirteen times more prevalent. Deaths from motor accidents have almost doubled. Bootlegging has sharply increased, though government sale was offered as a certain remedy for that evil. The Liquor Board of Saskatchewan reports officially that bootlegging increased 111 per cent the first year under government sale, and the liquor officials of British Columbia report that the bootleggers sell as much as the government stores.—W. G. Calderwood—(Adv.)

PROBLEMS DISCUSSED BY TWILIGHT LEAGUE GROUP

A meeting of the Bristol Twilight League was held in the office of D. Landreth Seed Company last night and many points of interest were brought up to the interest of fans of the league.

The protest of the Croydon Boys' Club was read and both sides to the story were related by the Croydon manager and the Federals manager. President Landreth decided to investigate the conditions and give his decision by Monday night.

A rule governing the ground rules at St. Ann's and the Croydon grounds was also passed. The rule states that the runner has to make the base on an overthrow at first, third, or home, unless there is interference by the spectators. Then he is entitled to base.

It was decided to have the play-off winners play under a 60-40 basis.

A new rule states that no one is to coach for any team unless he is a signed player or manager.

The managers and directors were given until Monday night to have their entire second-half roster in the hands of an official of the league.

Managers and directors present at last night's meeting were: Emilie, Elias Prull; St. Ann's, John Field; Independents, Rocco Genco and Joseph Rubino; Croydon, William Forst and William Moran; A. O. H., James Hoffman and Charles McClafferty; Federals, John Mulholland.

INDEPENDENCE DAY RACES AT LANGHORNE

LANGHORNE, June 28.—Recent scandals in certain branches of sports have served as a medium to place automobile racing in the place in sports which it justly deserves.

So far as records show there has never been a foul in the game of dangerous speed where only men of steel nerves and proven ability and character are admitted under the watchful eye of the governing body, the American Automobile Association. The sport has been kept clean through the efforts of that association.

Independence Day will again see races at Langhorne Speedway that will attract thousands of fans from every section of the state for forty or more of the best drivers in the United States will enter the qualifying race on the morning of the Fourth. The eighteen fastest qualifiers will take part in the 100-mile race on the afternoon of the same day.

It will be a day full of speed for the morning events will get started at 10 o'clock just after the gates to the grounds will be thrown open. The forty cars will each be given their chance to make a lap sufficiently fast enough to race in the "big event" of the afternoon.

There will be a race for the cars that do not qualify in the 100-mile event. It will be a 25-mile race and will probably prove as exciting as the major event of the day.

Dirt track racing in the East has never before seen such preliminary action as is going on at Langhorne Speedway at the present time. The track is being groomed so that drivers will have an opportunity to try for new American records.

Prominent among the famous drivers will appear Bill Cummings, of Indianapolis, who won the last 100-mile race at Langhorne and who now stands second only to the youthful "Billy" Arnold in national ranking for the honors of the game for this season.

Others among the head-liners will be Fred Frame who returns from a winning campaign in Canada; Bob Robinson, who finished second to Frame a week ago on the Woodbridge track in New Jersey; Gordon Condon, of Altoona; Frank Farmer, who finished third in the Flag Day 200-mile classic at Altoona; Jimmie Gleason, Joe Miller, Zeke Meyer, Al Aspen, Horace Hunter, and others.

"We hope to pack the stands at Langhorne on the Fourth," said Ralph A. Hankinson, of New York, the one-remaining veteran promoter of automobile races.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ferry, of Buckley street, had as Sunday guests, Mrs. Ferry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bonner, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thompson, all of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rosenswig, of Cedar Grove, N. J., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Warren Armstrong, of 310 Jefferson avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Black, of 204 Cedar street, entertained at dinner on Sunday, their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Clossan and Mrs. Hannah Kirk, of Carversville, also Miss Sara Minor, of Bath Road, and Miss Edith Atkinson, of Riverton, N. J.

HAZARDS OF EAST-WEST FLIGHT AGAIN OVERCOME

Eight of Nine Previous Flight; Met with Failure, Bremen and Southern Cross Alone Reaching North American Shores

CREW OF SOUTHERN CROSS

BOSTON, June 28.—Eleven fearless, perhaps foolhardy, men and women lost their ill-starred lives in attempts to accomplish the hazardous "east-west trans-Atlantic airplane flight" just made by Captain Kingsford-Smith and his aides in the Southern Cross.

The only similar triumph over the fogs and perverse winds which make this noteworthy exploit a ghastly dice game with the Grim Reaper was won in 1918 by Captains Fitzmaurice and Koehl and Baron von Huenefeldt in their monoplane, Bremen.

Twenty-three others started to cross on eight other flights only to turn back in despair or be picked up by passing vessels or vanish into the storm-wracked mystery of the Atlantic.

Some aviation authorities assert that the sudden spasms of roaring wind and rain which make the east-west flight a danger-haunted ambition will always prove an unsurmountable obstacle to traveling this air route in anything but dirigibles.

Others are of the opinion that ingenious man-made inventions will enable future generations to traverse the course with the same ease and safety we of today stroll to the corner store.

Harry Hawker and Kenneth MacKenzie Grieve, two English aviators, were the first to challenge death in the east-west flight. In 1919, lured on by a $50,000 prize, they were forced down after flying more than half way to their goal. A Danish fishing vessel picked them up.

On May 8, 1927, two French aces, Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Francis Coll, started for New York from France in the White Bird. The ocean swallowed them up.

That August, Koehl and Friedrich Loose hopped off from Dessau, Germany, in the Bremen, only to be turned back by buffeting winds off Ireland.

The same month Princess Ludwig-Lowenstein-Wertheim, with two pilots, started for America in the monoplane St. Raphael and was never heard of again.

A few weeks later Lilli Dillenz, accompanied by two men, abandoned their trans-Atlantic flight attempt in the Azores.

Disaster trailed the ambition of the Honorable Elsie Mackay and Captain Walter R. C. Hinchcliffe, who took off from the Cranwell Airdrome in England in March, 1928, never to be heard of again.

Major Ramon Franco and three companions left Spain that June only to be wrecked near the Azores. After seven days of hopeless drifting they were rescued by a British aircraft carrier.

Last July Major Ludwig Idzikowski, a Pole, was killed when he ended his bid for air eminence by making a forced landing in the Azores. His partner, Major Casimir Kabula, was injured.

Three Swiss aviators, known as "mad fliers," took off from Paris in August and vanished without leaving a trace. Now that Kingsford-Smith has won out over death, who will be next to pay the grisly toll for mis-carried ambition?
